Nathan is a national catastrophic truck litigation attorney based out of Atlanta, Georgia. He has been working alongside his partner, Joe Fried, for now what is getting close to a decade. Since joining Fried Goldberg, LLC, Nathan has been an instrumental force in achieving numerous 7-figure and multiple 8-figure case resolutions since joining Fried Goldberg.

Nathan has worked on a wide variety of commercial motor vehicle cases against the largest trucking companies in the United States, including cases that concern standard fact patterns such as adverse weather conditions, sitting ducks, etc. but also new trucking industry technology, such as forward collision avoidance technology, AI drive cameras, and app-based independent contractor systems. Nathan's representative cases include a multiple-fatality wreck involving school children and a private bus company in Tennessee; a triple fatality caused by a double-tractor trailer in Arizona; and a recent 8-figure verdict against Amazon's DSP program.

Nathan's primary experience is in working up big expert-driven cases and fixing complex issues and problems when they occur. While Nathan's primary interest is in working on catastrophic truck cases, he also enjoys teaching other lawyers on strategies for handling truck accident cases and avoiding problems.
